

Christmas Comes but Once a Year - 1850

John Leighton - Luke Limner - was an illustrator and publisher based in London, and among a variety of other activities, was in charge of the committee collecting designs for industrial art for the Exhibition of 1862. He used the nom-de-plume Luke Limner for some of his work. His illustrations, found in many books and periodicals of the 1860s-90s, are very varied in quality. Often workmanlike but nondescript, at their best they can be imaginative and show a good sense of contrast and composition.
