

March to the Monteria

An incredible forced march of Indian laborers into the Mexican jungle by vicious labor agents. They are going to the monterias, the mahogany forest camps where they will work as indentured slaves. Many of these human beings will die in these camps by beatings and hanging (as depicted in B. Traven's serial book THE REBELLION OF THE HANGED). Along the way, they make their mark against two of the agents who themselves don't survive the march. These Indians become another determined group for land and freedom in the Mexican Revolution of 1910. Collectors Edition!
